The biggest question: how did the fraudulent firm get so far? Protopia: Breaking Up the Boys' Club of Silicon Valley, by Emily ChangSilicon Valley might like nothing more than to huff on about its utopian ideals, but this exposé<sup>o</sup>ñ by Bloomberg journalist Emily Chang shows the tech scene for the misogynistic quagmire it is. Her latest once again takes a critical look at our economy, asking fundamental questions about modern capitalism and what it would take to reform. Mathematician and presenter Hannah Fry leads us through the not-too-distant world of AI politics, healthcare and culture, probing the complex roles of data and algorithms through a range of eye-opening examples. He argues that we are unable to understand the technological systems that underpin society, but instead of smashing the looms, we should work in coalitions to reclaim the network we<sup>e</sup>ñAAñs all tangled within. William Davies convincingly argues that declining trust in the authority of experts and the expanding mechanisms of disinformation have produced a world where emotions rule. Neuroscientist Sarah-Jayne Blakemore sheds some light on what<sup>e</sup>ñAAñs going on in the brain during adolescence<sup>o</sup>ñAAñ an important time for development and one at which many mental illnesses first manifest. It<sup>e</sup>ñAAñs an unsettling but perceptive read.Picnic Comma Lighting: In Search of a New Reality, by Laurence ScottLaurence Scott<sup>e</sup>ñAAñs book on the signs and symbols of the digital age is insightful, in part for its academic nuance but also for its humane, personal style.
